I am appalled at the idea that the Connecticut Government would put the SIM Plan into play. The idea that a provider has the power to control the way an individual is cared for is inhuman.

A Doctor takes an oath to treat all patients alike with providing the best care to all. To think a Doctor would withhold information and options available is ignoring his oath. That a provider would have control over patients care and reduce care so they can save money shows they have no consideration a human being.

I myself have Medicare & I'm a retired nurse. I have always love working in the medical professional and have worked along side Doctors who also loved caring for their patients. That they would feel okay with the SIM's plan is sad.

My son has a Traumatic Brain Injury and even after 3 years still needs Physical Therapy, follow ups , and medications. To think he might not be able to get the treatments he needs is atrocious. Worst yet if a Doctor might withhold options available is inhuman .

I do hope the Connecticut Government will reconsider this plan and provide the best options in health care for all of their citizens.

Yours truly,
